Keep in mind, though, that literacy is not just a skill, it is also a love—a love of books and the magic they offer. Below are some general guidelines about how children play with books from birth to age 3: 0-6 months: May calm down while a familiar story or rhyme is read. 6-8 months: May begin to explore books by looking, touching and mouthing.

The early reading stage may begin in kindergarten and continue into first grade. During this stage, children begin acquiring more sight words, which helps them to read early texts. They solidify their recognition of letter-sounds and use this knowledge to help them begin solving words. Children also use pictures as clues to help them predict words.
